Catherine Cooke, PharmD, BCPS
Research Associate Professor, Department of Pharmacy Practice and Science
Cooke earned her Doctor of Pharmacy degree from the Medical University of South Carolina and completed a managed care residency at the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy University of the Sciences. She has worked in academia, managed care, and the pharmaceutical industry. In these areas, she studied medication-taking behavior by examining factors associated with adherence to chronic therapies. Her research focuses on health outcomes associated with medication use.

Young Ah Goo, PhD
Research Assistant Professor, Department of Pharmaceutical Sciences
Associate Director, Mass Spectrometry Center
Goo received a PhD in genome sciences/pathobiology from the University of Washington, where she gained expertise in functional genomics, proteomics using mass spectrometry, and systems biology. She completed a postdoctoral fellowship at the Institute for Systems Biology in Seattle, where she worked in the prostate cancer research group and the proteomics group. Before joining the School of Pharmacy, she was a clinical assistant professor in the School of Nursing at the University of Washington in Seattle, where her research focused on chronic pain syndromes. Her current research focuses on the use of mass spectrometry-based proteomics applications to study biological questions, applying global systems approaches with a focus toward the discovery of diagnostic/prognostic biomarkers, and therapeutic targets for human diseases.

Mathangi Gopalakrishnan, PhD, MS
Research Assistant Professor, Department of Pharmacy Practice and Science
Gopalakrishnan obtained her BS and MS degrees in pharmacy from Birla Institute of Technology and Science in Pilani, India. She completed another MS and a PhD in statistics at the University of Maryland, Baltimore County. Working in the School of Pharmacy’s Center for Translational Medicine, Gopalakrishnan’s research interests include pharmacometrics, Bayesian applications in drug development, and innovative clinical trial designs.

Hazem Hassan, PhD
Research Assistant Professor, Department of Pharmaceutical Sciences
Hassan received a BS degree in pharmacy from Helwan University in Cairo, Egypt. He then came to the School of Pharmacy, where he received his PhD and completed a postdoctoral fellowship. Hassan previously held positions as an assistant professor at Helwan University and as an adjunct assistant professor at the Modern Sciences and Arts University in Egypt. He is a registered pharmacist, licensed to practice in Maryland. The focus of his research is to investigate the pharmacokinetics and biopharmaceutics aspects that impact drug development and drug therapy optimization.
Vijay Ivaturi, PhD

Research Assistant Professor,
Department of Pharmacy Practice and Science

Ivaturi received his PhD in experimental and clinical pharmacology from the University of Minnesota. He completed a postdoctoral fellowship in pharmacometrics at Uppsala University in Sweden. Working in the School of Pharmacy’s Center for Translational Medicine, Ivaturi’s research focuses on the development of methods and tools for quantitative clinical pharmacology that can be applied in informed decision-making in clinical therapeutics and drug development.

Eleanor Perfetto, PhD, MS
Professor, Department of Pharmaceutical Health Services Research

Perfetto is renowned for her work in comparative effectiveness research, quality, health economics and outcomes research, and related policy and regulatory topics. Before joining the School of Pharmacy, she was senior director of federal government relations at Pfizer, Inc. She holds BS and MS degrees in pharmacy from the University of Rhode Island, and a PhD from the University of North Carolina School of Public Health, concentrating in health policy and epidemiology. She is a board member of the Pharmacy Quality Alliance and the Center for Medical Technology Policy. In recent years, she has served on boards and committees for the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, the National Quality Forum, and the Health Industry Forum. Early in her career, Perfetto served in the U.S. Public Health Service, initially as an Indian Health Service pharmacist and later as a senior pharmacoepidemiologist at the Agency for Health Care Policy and Research, now the Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality. Perfetto is an advocate for patients with head trauma-related dementias, receiving wide recognition for her advocacy efforts. She currently serves on the board for and is the immediate past president of the board of directors for the Sports Legacy Institute.

Brent Reed, PharmD, BCPS
Assistant Professor, Department of Pharmacy Practice and Science

Reed received a BS degree in biology from the University of Tennessee and a Doctor of Pharmacy degree from the University of Tennessee College of Pharmacy. He completed both a pharmacy practice residency and a cardiology specialty residency at the University of North Carolina Hospitals in Chapel Hill. He is a board-certified pharmacotherapy specialist. Reed’s practice and research interests include cardiovascular critical care, acute decompensated heart failure, cardiac transplantation, and mechanical hemodynamic support. He is a fellow of the American Heart Association and a member of its Council of Clinical Cardiology’s Clinical Pharmacology Committee, and a former trustee of the American Pharmacists Association (APhA), national president for the APhA Academy of Student Pharmacists, and chair of the APhA New Practitioner Advisory Committee. He recently received APhA’s Distinguished New Practitioner Award.
