About the Speaker

Michael Steele is an MSNBC political analyst and host of The Michael Steele Podcast who formerly served as lieutenant governor of Maryland and chair of the Republican National Committee (RNC).

Steele made history in November 2002 as the first African-American elected to Maryland statewide office, winning as lieutenant governor under Robert L. Ehrlich Jr., JD. In 2009, he became the first African-American elected to head the RNC.

As lieutenant governor from 2003 to 2007, Steele's priorities included reforming Maryland's Minority Business Enterprise program, improving the quality of the state's public education system, expanding economic development, and fostering cooperation between government and faith-based organizations to help the needy.

Under Steele's leadership, the RNC broke fundraising records in the 2010 congressional cycle with over $198 million raised and Republicans won 63 House seats, the party's biggest pickup since 1938. Steele's commitment to grassroots organizations and party building at the state and local levels produced 12 governorships for Republicans and the greatest share of state legislative seats since 1928.

In addition to his MSNBC role, Steele has appeared on Meet the Press, Face the Nation, Real Time with Bill Maher, and The Daily Show. His writings on law, business, and politics have appeared in numerous publications and websites, including The Wall Street Journal, The Hill, Politico, and The Journal of International Security Affairs.
