Good afternoon!

Snow and frigid temperatures from the Gulf to Canada, ice in Maryland, earthquakes in Oklahoma, Ted Cruz in Cancun – this week has been a doozy!
So what has been going on?

The USMAI is moving forward with procuring a new library management system. Steve Douglas will be our representative to the Project Advisory Committee however I expect this project will touch many, if not all of us in some way as there will be subject workgroups, testing groups, and many opinions to be gathered.

More - I hope many of you had a chance to tune into President Jarrell's President's Panel on Politics and Policy to listen to Ibram X. Kendi, author of How to be an Antiracist. His talk was thought-provoking and very honest. If you missed it you can watch the video here: <https://www.umaryland.edu/politics-panel/how-to-be-an-anti-racist-with-ibram-x-kendi-phd-ma/> You should have received an email about a university-wide book discussion.

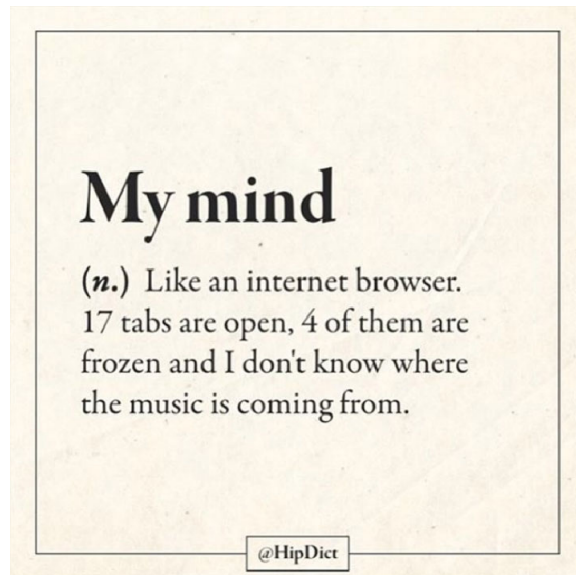

The Outreach Service Project Task Force has been rejuvenated under the leadership of Tara Wink and will seek to become an official committee in the HSHSL.

Communications to All Staff:

NIH MedlinePlus Magazine <https://content.govdelivery.com/accounts/USNLMOCPL/bulletins/2c25330> - back pain, cholesterol

And some humor:

Thanks to Tony Nguyen for this one:

It's here! The first image from Perseverance after landing on Mars:

This was taken before the ice and snow earlier this week:

And this was taken through my skylight – Brrrrr!:

Stay safe and well!
