

Interprofessional Education

IPE Day 2016

As health care is evolving in the United States there is a growing understanding that health care professionals need to be able to work effectively in teams to optimize the outcomes of the care that is being provided to individuals, families, and communities. The fourth annual Interprofessional Education Day at the University of Maryland, Baltimore provides an opportunity for our students and faculty to come together to learn with, from, and about each other. On behalf of the co-directors of the Center for Interprofessional Education, thank you for committing to advance your knowledge and skills to provide team-based care.

Jane Kirschling, PhD, RN, FAAN
Director, Center for Interprofessional Education
Dean and Professor, School of Nursing

Student and faculty participants in IPE Day will engage in interactive activities that cover the following competencies from the Interprofessional Education Collaborative (IPEC):

Respect the unique cultures, values, roles/responsibilities, and expertise of other health professionals

Act with honesty and integrity in relationships with patients, families, and other team members

Communicate one's roles and responsibilities clearly to patients, families, and other professionals

Listen actively and encourage ideas and opinions of other team members

Engage other health professionals – appropriate to the specific care situation – in shared patient-centered problem-solving

Reflect on individual and team performance for individual, as well as team, performance improvement

Organized by the Center for Interprofessional Education

Sponsored by Dr. and Mrs. James A. Earl and the Helena Foundation
