HOSPITAL THANKS HOLIDAY VISITORS

The Volunteer Services Department at University Hospital was very pleased with the many groups that visited hospital patients during the Christmas holidays.

"Several of our own volunteers made special efforts to come in over the holidays to spend some time with patients," said Nancy Brown, director.

Choirs, school classes and even individuals brought the spirit of Christmas to the hospital. Edward Sigman brought games and stuffed animals to pediatric patients, records to adolescent patients, and magazines for the adult patients, in addition to candy for everyone.

A class from School #11 brought stockings and stuffed animals for elderly and pediatric patients. Brooklyn Park Elementary School, through the Red Cross, provided Christmas tray favors and stockings for children and adults.

The Women's Auxiliary of University Hospital decorated 400 baskets with fresh evergreens and various items and distributed them to every patient in the hospital.

Many choirs who sang during the holidays plan to return to the hospital in the spring.

The Lansdowne Senior High School Choir was one of the many groups that visited University Hospital during the Christmas holidays.
