

Bibliography of John C Erfurt (1934–1992)

(Editor's Note: It is a time honored tradition to salute and remember a cherished colleague through publication of a list of the manuscripts that individual published during his or her lifetime. Such a publication can serve many purposes. Study of a bibliography can lead one to a scholar's earlier works that elaborate on points that come to be taken for granted in later works. The publications list also shows the progression as well as the scope of the scholar's research interests. Finally, and perhaps most important, the bibliography is in many ways the biography of the scholar and researcher.

Often one's bibliography is found at the end of the publication of a "festschrift." This German word describes a set of essays by colleagues and students centered around the influence of the scholar's work on the ideas, research, and writing of others. The plan for Jack Erfurt's time with us did not allow for the preparation of a festschrift for him. But, fitting with Jack's philosophy of life and death, the design of his festschrift would desirably go beyond the single slice of time represented by a single book of essays.

To complete this logic: Much of the work that is appearing and will appear in the Journal of Employee Assistance Research is a reflection of the influence of Jack's ideas and research. Thus we fondly designate the ongoing flow of this publication as Jack's festschrift. Therefore it seems an appropriate place to publish his bibliography. P.M.R.)
