REPORT OF

The Board of Medical Examiners
TO THE
House of Delegates,
Medical and Chirurgical Faculty

APRIL, 1922

Hagerstown, Md., April 15, 1922.

Mr. President and Members of the House of Delegates:

The Report of last year showed a tabulation of some interest, as presenting the range of our work in Examination and Licensure during the preceding ten years, the average number of participants for the period being 164—the highest in one year being 254, and the number in 1920 being 142. The Record for 1921 showed 145.

Whether or not these figures furnish a trustworthy basis upon which to judge of future numerical additions to the Profession is perhaps indeterminable, but we do know that conditions exist which should naturally tend to deter men and women from entering the Medical Profession with the avowed purpose of deriving from its pursuit such pecuniary returns as will secure a comfortable living and provide a fund for that period of incapacity which comes with unerring certainty if life should be prolonged. We are, of course, familiar with these conditions, and it is needless to enumerate, but notable, however, are the spread of cults and the avidity with which the laity accept their methods and assurances of relief; the constant and rapidly increasing complexity and expense involved in a course of medical study, the universal and prodigious effort of State and Nation, justified by every consideration of economy and humanity, to conserve health by preventing disease. As of old the slogan was "Millions for defense but not a cent for tribute", so the spirit of today is to spend, and spend to the utmost, to conserve health, to bulwark against disease and save our people from its ravages.

Therefore, does it not appear that the field of Medicine may lose its attractiveness, and is there not much justification for the question now so prominent in current Medical literature as to the future of the Medical profession?

With not a little misgiving do we attempt the determination of what now constitutes the real function of an Examining and Licensing Board. Thirty years ago when the physician's right to practice medicine and surgery was first hedged by the legislative enactment it was comparatively easy. The twofold purpose then was protection of the public from the blatant and notorious charlatan, and from those who flaunted Diplomas secured by cash payments, or compliance with the easy and indulgent terms of a Medical College whose existence was purposeless except to draw students and reap a rich pecuniary return. Such was the unfortunate situation, and it was not difficult to establish a standard of medical education—and examination for License which should be the basis for legalized practice, regardless of teaching body, school or equipment. Standards and methods were established and valuable results to the profession and laity quickly followed. In the intervening period, however, marvelous advances have been made in medical research, new fountains have been opened and streams of knowledge issue which should be utilized, so far as practicable, in adding to the equipment of those whose great function is to protect mankind in our combat with disease.

And this raises the question of the relationship of the Examining and Licensing Board to the ever widening field of medical research. Is it within the province of the Examining and Licensing Board to direct the scope of work by Medical Colleges, to prescribe a course of instruction for them to observe, or is it rather for the Board of Examiners by such methods and procedures as it regards best adapted for the purpose to limit its work to ascertainment of the qualification of those appearing for Examination?

The significance of this query and the gravity of the problem is readily understood if you have familiarized yourself with the proceedings of the "Annual Congress on Medical Examination, Licensure Public Health and Hospitals" held in Chicago March 6-10, 1922, abstracted in the various Journals, and with quite full Report in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

While we are sincerely interested in every project tending to the extension of knowledge in the various departments, and bringing the results of scientific research into practical availability and use in the unceasing struggle in which our profession is engaged, it would seem that the work of the Boards of Examiners and Licensure should be rather rigidly restricted to the determination of qualification and fitness for which they were organized, and to which their efforts have been directed.

The discussion of this subject, as indicated by the title of the Congress, covered a wide field and was presented by men of large experience, forceful speech and of almost presuasive eloquence. It is not the purpose of this Report, nor would it be within its range to make a detailed presentation of these discussions and though there was much confusion of intellect following the reading, we have noted sentiments or opinions of value which we incorporate. In reference to "Uniformity of opportunity for interns to get service in hospitals", and the question is raised, "Shall the Hospital be supervised by the State Board of Medical Examiners", to which all agreed that this "is not the function of the State Board of Licensure—that they are not in touch with the Hospitals and are not Medical Educators primarily"—with which this Board is in full accord.

A declaration of great truth, but not observed as it should be, "We should select students with character who will recognize that the medical profession is a profession of service—if it is not that it is nothing". A splendid elevating sentiment to which we all subscribe, but the practicability of applying it to the enrollment or formation of the student body is far beyond our ken.

There may be much truth in the statement of an educator from a leading medical school in the South, "Our Medical Students come to what they are going to be largely in spite of our training, and it does not make so much difference what they get from us, in the way of facts, as it is that they get the right spirit. If they get the spirit of being students and carry that spirit when they get into their work, so that they may study anatomy, physiology, etc., the rest of their lives and do not feel they have finished their education after graduation, we will turn out students who will go on as such indefinitely and the details we give them in the class room are relatively unimportant." Does not that seem to be the real inspiring influence that must keep secure the medical profession in the admiration, gratitude and support of our fellow men? If we imbibe the spirit that animated the lives of those who have passed but whom we love and regard as our exemplars our task will be lightened and the warrant for the complicating discussion to which we have referred will be greatly minimized or entirely removed.

Of far greater importance in the practical discharge of the duties of the Maryland Examining and Licensing Board and demanding close and intelligent consideration is the union of the various Governmental Departments which will affect the work of the Board and becoming effective January 1st, 1923.

In this Reorganization Chapter 29, approved March 1, 1922, Section 16 says "The Department of State Employment and Registration is established and provides that the head of this Department shall be the "State Employment Commissioner"—assigning various Boards of this Department, among which is the "Board of Medical Examiners."

That you may understand how the Board of Medical Examiners will be affected by this law we quote Section 2:

"Upon the taking effect of this Act, and annually thereafter, and also from time to time as may be necessary, each of the Boards and agencies mentioned in Section 2 hereof shall submit to the Board of Public Works an itemized estimate of the amount of fees and other income which it will receive during the ensuing year, and also an itemized estimate of its expenses and disbursements during the ensuing year. The Board of Estimates shall approve all or such portion of said estimated expenses and disbursements as it deems proper, and each of said Boards and agencies shall make no expenditures except for purposes approved by the Board of Public Works, which shall in each case determine the time for such annual estimates to be submitted.

SECTION 4. All money remaining in the hands of any of said Boards and agencies at the close of each year, after the payment of the expenditures authorized and approved under the preceding section hereof shall be annually accounted for and paid into the General Treasury of the State. The Board of Public Works shall determine the time or times for such annual accounting in each case, and if they find it necessary, the said Board may authorize a working cash balance to be carried over to the credit of any said Boards or agencies.

SECTION 5. Upon the taking effect of this act the Board of Public Works shall determine which of the Boards or Agencies mentioned in Section 2 can discharge its duties, or part of its duties, with equal or greater efficiency and greater economy at the office of the Commissioner of State Employment and Registration, and thereupon, after such notice as the said Board may find necessary, it shall be the duty of each such board or agency so notified thereafter to maintain its office and discharge its duties, or to discharge such part of its duties as the Board of Public Works may so determine, at the office of the said Commissioner of State Employment and Registration; and the said Commissioner shall provide the necessary quarters, means, facilities, paraphernalia and clerical assistance therefor."

The effect of this radical change in administration can not be foretold. It involves regulation and direction by officials necessarily unfamiliar with the purposes of the Medical Practice law, its scope and methods of administration. Where a great latitude has been granted the Faculty and the Board by law, under which it has been operating radical departures therefrom have been created. When legal advice was needed we sought counsel familiar with and interested in our work. As new conditions arose requiring investigation and money expenditures the judgment of the Board determined. If by reason of economies or unexpected receipts a surplus occurred, the Board was free and glad to take care of the Faculty's needs as funds were available. In 1920 and 1921, $1000.00 was paid over to the Treasurer, and on March 31, 1922, $500.00 was likewise paid. Similar donations were made during the construction of our building as shown by our Report. Under the new law such payments will be uncertain, as any surplus remaining after budget expenses have been met will be paid into the General Treasury of the State.

We count the new law effective January 1st, 1923, as of probably far greater influence upon the regulation of medical practice, the educational uplifting of the profession and the protection of the general health, than the many sided discussions by the Congress held in Chicago and to which we have made much reference.

Whether this law will work good or evil is at present of grave uncertainty.

Respectfully,

J. McP. Scott, Secretary.

In the above summary an average of 75 is required of those participating in the examination for the first time in order to secure a license. Those who have failed are eligible to re-examination at the expiration of six months. They are then obliged to receive a rating of 75 in each branch in which they are re-examined before license can be issued. Under the Maryland laws, students who, at the end of their second year, have successfully passed their college examination in Anatomy, Chemistry, Materis Medica and Physiology, are entitled to examination by the Board of Medical Examiners in these branches. The ratings made by these students in the examination known as the "second-year examination" are carried forward and made part of the final examination, when an average of 75 must be obtained to secure a license. We trust that this statement will make clear the apparently incomplete examination of certain participants.

Report of the Board of Medical Examiners of Maryland

QUESTIONS AT THE JUNE (1921) EXAMINATION

CHEMISTRY

1. What nitrogenous substances are eliminated in the urine?
2. State the difference between fat and fatty acids.
3. What are nucleoproteins, and into what substances may they be broken up?
4. Name the most important constituents of saliva.
5. Give the reaction of the blood. By what mechanism is it maintained?
6. What do you understand by "nitrogen equilibrium?"
7. Name the protein bodies found in blood plasma.
8. What is meant by "assimilation limit" of carbohydrates? How is it determined?
9. Give a brief discussion of amino acids.
10. Describe the process of hemolysis by hypoisotonic solutions.

DR. HENRY T. COLLENBERG,
Examiner.

Tuesday morning, June 28, 1921.

ANATOMY

1. Describe upper third of humerus.
2. Locate the following: Sphenoidal fissure, foramen magnum, carotid canal, linea aspera, bicipital groove.
3. Name cranial nerves in order and give function of each.
4. Outline topographically the spleen and roots of the lungs.
5. Locate the motor, sensory and motor speech areas.
6. Locate and give formation of the circle of Willis.
7. Give relations, divisions and branches of subclavian and axillary arteries.
8. (a) What veins return blood from digestion apparatus? (b) Where do these veins empty?
9. Give attachments, action and nerve supply of the following muscles: Platysma myoides, Latissimus dorsi, Psoas magnus, Teres major.
10. Bound Scarpa's triangle and name its contents.

DR. HERBERT HARLAN,
Examiner.

Tuesday afternoon, June 28, 1921.

THERAPEUTICS

1. Write a prescription in Latin without abbreviations containing four ingredients and state its use.
2. Write a prescription in Latin of official preparation without abbreviation for use in acute pharyngitis.

3. Hydg. protochloride, its general and special therapy and basis for its professional household popularity.
4. Assuming that there is an alterative action in drugs, write a prescription in Latin without abbreviation stating use.
5. To meet the nervous condition known as hysteria—what drug or combination of drugs would be indicated?
6. Name three salts of kali and give therapy.
7. Name three salts of sodium and give therapy.
8. Name two oxytocics and state condition justifying their use.
9. State briefly the elements that should be eliminated from the diet of the obese.
10. Give the popular name of pulv. ipecac comp. and state its therapy.

J. MCP. SCOTT,
Examiner.

Wednesday morning, June 29, 1921.

MATERIA MEDICA

1. (a) What are circulatory stimulants? (b) Name some of them and state how they act. (c) How may a drug increase blood pressure? (d) Name some of the drugs that increase blood pressure.
2. (a) State what you know about adrenalin. (b) How used. Dose.
3. (a) What are stomachics? Define them. (b) Name some of them and give dose of each.
4. Iodine. Describe it; how obtained; official preparations; doses.
5. (a) Mercury. Preparations, doses and how administered. (b) How are black and yellow wash made.
6. (a) What are antimalarials? (b) How do they exert a curative influence? Name some and give doses. (c) What are anthelmintics? Name some and give doses.
7. (a) Salicylic acid. Describe and give dose. (b) Name three of its salts or compounds in general use and give dose of each.
8. (a) Glycerine. How obtained. Name incompatibles. (b) Pilocarpus. What is the common name? Describe it and name most active alkaloid and dose.
9. (a) Write a prescription for a four ounce mixture for an adult. The prescription to contain tincture nux vomica, fluidextract cascara sagrada and elixir lactated pepsin, using official terms. (b) Write a prescription containing boric acid and zinc sulphate to be used in the eye. (c) Write a prescription containing nitrate of silver to be used in the eye.
10. (a) What is meant by chemical incompatibility in prescription and what evils may result? (b) Write a prescription illustrating chemical incompatibility. State which ingredients are incompatible.

DR. LEWIS A. GRIFFITH,
Examiner.

Wednesday morning, June 29, 1921.

PHYSIOLOGY

1. (a) What is the aim of digestion? (b) State briefly the process of digestion.

2. State what influence bile has in digestion and what disturbances result from its absence.

3. How are the (a) proteids, (b) carbohydrates, (c) fats, and (d) salts utilized in the process of metabolism?

4. What is accomplished physiologically by the portal circulation?

5. Describe the functions of thyroids and parathyroids including a consideration of their removal.

6. (a) What postmortem test should be applied to prove that air has entered the lungs of a supposedly still-born child? (b) Give a method of producing artificial respiration? How long should it be continued?

7. Locate the following centers; speech, sight, hearing, taste and motor area.

8. Describe the lymphatic system.

9. (a) What are ptomaines and how produced? (b) What proportion of nitrogenous and non-nitrogenous elements in the diet is most advantageous? (c) What becomes of the nitrogen ingested with food?

10. Give reaction and cause of reaction of (a) saliva, (b) gastric juice, (c) pancreatic juice, (d) bile.

DR. LEWIS A. GRIFFITH,
Examiner.

Wednesday afternoon, June 29, 1921.

PATHOLOGY

1. Define haemolysis, cytolysis, diapedesis, edema, extravasation.

2. Give pathology of an irritable anal ulcer.

3. Describe the healing of an uninjected wound; of an infected wound.

4. What is amyloid degeneration? Mention two conspicuous examples.

5. What is meant by the term "Compensation" as applied to cases of heart-disease?

6. Describe the local changes that produce a macule? papule? vesicle? pustule?

7. Define calculi. Mention several forms and describe the method of formation and physical and chemical properties of at least two.

8. Mention some pathological processes that are directly and specifically changed by the administration of drugs. Give the theory as to the action of the drug in each case.

9. Define necrosis, necrobiosis, atrophy, hypertrophy, hyperplasia.

10. Describe b. anthracis. Describe a case of anthrax from a pathological standpoint.

DR. HENRY M. FITZHUGH,
Examiner.

Thursday morning, June 30, 1921.

PRACTICE OF MEDICINE

1. Name the varieties of dysentery and give the treatment for two of them.

2. Give the symptoms and treatment of gout.

3. What are the causes of transient increase in blood pressure; of chronic increase in blood pressure and the secondary effects of the latter.

4. Differentiate acute appendicitis from typhoid fever; from pneumonia.

5. Give the probable cause and diagnostic points in aortic aneurism (thoracic).

6. Name the causes of haematuria; of peripheral facial paralysis; of dyspnea.

7. Give the symptoms and treatment of pyloric stenosis in an infant three or four weeks old.

8. Give the prophylaxis, symptoms and treatment of tetanus.

9. Give the cause, symptoms and treatment of herpes zoster.

10. Discuss the use of vaccines: (a) prophylactic, (b) curative.

DR. ELDREDGE E. WOLFF,
Examiner.

Thursday afternoon, June 30, 1921.

SURGERY

1. Give symptoms, diagnosis, prognosis and treatment of ophthalmia neonatorum.

2. Symptomatology and treatment of acute catarrhal otitis media.

3. What symptoms and conditions referable to the gall-bladder or liver would call for operative interference?

4. What surgical conditions must be considered in retention of urine? Outline an operation for the correction of any one condition selected with reasons for selecting this.

5. State the usual position of the fragments in an oblique fracture of the lower third of the femur, and the muscular control of the fragments.

6. In severe injury about the ankle joint, numerate what possible lesions should be considered.

7. Give symptoms, diagnosis and treatment of Pott's disease in the dorsal region.

8. A patient has continued fever lasting two weeks, ranging from 99 in the morning to 101.5 at night. She has two loose stools to four daily. The tongue is coated. Her abdomen is slightly tender to pressure to the left of the bladder region, and below the margin of the rib one inch to the right of the right mammary line there is another tender area with slight resistance. Two years ago she had her breast removed for a so-called tumor.

She has a negative Widal. She has a white count of 1500. Give diagnosis and treatment.

9. What is the most frequent dislocation of shoulder joint? Give diagnosis, two methods of reduction with after treatment.

10. Define ischemic contracture. How may it be avoided, and if it does occur what can be done for its correction?

DR. HARRY L. HOMER,
Examiner.

Friday morning, July 1, 1921.

OBSTETRICS AND GYNECOLOGY

1. Describe two methods of determining the conjugate vera.
2. Explain formation of: (a) foetus papyraceus, (b) foetus acardia or acardious.
3. How does kyphosis influence labor?
4. When and how would you use chloroform, pituitrin and ergot in obstetrical practice?

5. In placenta previa, under what conditions would you use: (a) vaginal tampon, (b) hydrostatic dilator, (c) rupture of membranes, (d) internal podalic version.

6. Give the evidence on which you would make a diagnosis of asphyxia before delivery of the child.

7. Give the external measurements of a normal pelvis.

8. How do you dress the umbilicus of a new born baby?

9. Give treatment for dysmenorrhea.

10. Describe in detail treatment for a simple cyst of Bartholin's Gland.

DR. JOHN L. RILEY,
Examiner.

Friday afternoon, July 1, 1921.

In the above summary an average of 75 is required of those participating in the examination for the first time in order to secure a license. Those who have failed are eligible to re-examination at the expiration of six months. They are then obliged to receive a rating of 75 in each branch in which they are re-examined before license can be issued. Under the Maryland laws, students who, at the end of their second year, have successfully passed their college examination in Anatomy, Chemistry, Materia Medica and Physiology are entitled to examination by the Board of Medical Examiners in these branches. The ratings made by these students in the examination known as the "second-year examination" are carried forward and made part of the final examination, when an average of 75 must be obtained to secure a license. We trust that this statement will make clear the apparently incomplete examination of certain participants.

1. How do you care for the breasts of the mother during the first week after the birth of the child?

2. Give signs and symptoms of multiple pregnancy.

3. Should a curettage be done during the puerperal period?

ANSWER—yes or no—and give your reasons for doing so.

4. What injuries may occur in the birth canal incident to labor?

5. What are the symptoms of impending eclampsia?

6. Give treatment for caput succedaneum.

7. What position and presentation is most frequently seen and why?

8. What preparations should you make for a normal labor?

9. Describe a cervico-vaginal fistula and give treatment.

10. What pathological conditions should be treated by hysterectomy?

DR. JOHN L. RILEY,
Examiner.

Friday afternoon, December 16, 1921.

CHEMISTRY

1. What type of albumin is found in (1) normal urine, (2) in nephritic urine? Give another cause of albuminuria besides nephritis.

2. Of what elements are carbohydrates composed? Give general formulae of the more common classes.

3. What do you understand by "Total nitrogen" and non protein nitrogen?

4. Give the procedure of the examination of a test meal for ordinary clinical purposes.

5. What enzymes are concerned in the digestion of proteins?

6. Name the two most common carbohydrates which may be found in the urine and tell how they may be distinguished from one another.

7. How may (1) neutral fats and (2) undigested starches be demonstrated in the feces?

8. Give a test for occult blood.

9. Mention some tests that may be of value in helping to determine the presence of acidosis.

10. What is the normal amount of urea in the blood and in the urine? What changes may take place in these amounts in nephritis?

DR. H. T. COLLENBERG,
Examiner.

Tuesday morning, December 13, 1921.

ANATOMY

1. Describe the radius—articulations, muscular attachments.

2. Define synarthrosis, amphiarthrosis, diarthrosis. Example of each.

3. Liver—gross anatomy, including location, attachments and relations?

4. Through what vessels would circulation be established after ligation of brachial artery in lower third.

5. Describe the pituitary body.

6. Describe the muscles terminating in the tendo achillis. (Attachments, action and nerve supply.)

7. Describe the ductus communis choledochus.

8. Describe the lachrymal apparatus.

9. Larynx:—gross anatomy.

10. What structures are supplied by the following nerves: Fourth and seventh cranial nerves, small sciatic and obturator.

DR. HERBERT HARLAN,
Examiner.

Tuesday afternoon, December 13, 1921.

THERAPEUTICS

1. Briefly state the therapeutics of mineral acids.

2. What agent is of preferable use in morbid alkalinity of the urine?

3. Give the general therapy of iodum. Name three combinations and special uses.

4. Therapy of salicin and its derivatives. Name two preparations.

5. Therapy of scopolia. Name two preparations.

6. Write two official preparations, stating the incompatibility they represent and their therapy.

7. Write a prescription of therapeutic incompatibility—naming the antagonists.

8. Therapy of sulphur—naming two preparations.

9. Saccharum and saccharin—Describe each and state use.

10. Digipuratum—Therapy and indications as to dosage and use.

DR. J. MCPHERSON SCOTT,
Examiner.

Wednesday morning, December 14, 1921.

MATERIA MEDICA

1. Name official preparations of belladonna and give dose of those used internally.

2. What are alkaloids? Name some. (b) From what source besides nux vomica is strichnin obtained. (c) Why should you prescribe the salts of the alkaloids instead of the alkaloids themselves.

3. Give the hypodermic dose of the following: Sulphate of strichnine; sulphate of atropine; sulphate of morphine; apomorphine hydrochlorate; nitroglycerine and pilocarpine hydrochlorate.

4. What circumstances modify the effects of drugs and should influence the dosage? Give a rule for determining the dose of children of different ages.

5. (a) What are cerebral depressants? And how are they classed. (b) Name some of each class.

6. Define toxins and antitoxins and mention some conditions in which serum therapy has proven successful.

7. (a) What is opium? (b) How obtained?
- (c) What are the chief alkaloids of opium?
- (d) Name the official preparations.

8. Write a tonic prescription for an adult containing at least four ingredients.

9. State what you know of electricity as a therapeutic agent and method of application or administration.

10. (a) Define germicides, antiseptics and deodorizers. Name three of each. (b) State which antiseptics are most generally used internally and give doses.

DR. LEWIS A. GRIFFITH,
Examiner.

Wednesday morning, December 14, 1921.

PHYSIOLOGY

1. Describe the function of the mucous membrane of the respiratory tract.

2. (a) State causes of pressure in the arteries, capillaries and veins. (b) What is the normal ratio of respiration to heart pulsation?

3. Describe the process of osmosis and diffusion and give examples in the human economy.

4. (a) Name the secretions of the alimentary canal, their reactions and functions.
(b) Name the active principles of the digestive secretions.

5. Define absorption and nutrition, and mention the facts that favor absorption and those that retard it. (b) What are the channels of absorption?

6. (a) Blood—the composition, specific gravity, reaction. (b) State the normal proportion of blood in the human body. What changes take place as it passes through the kidneys?

7. (a) Describe bile and its uses. Where first found. Trace its course. (b) Name the bile salts.

8. (a) What do you understand by blood pressure. (b) What factors determine normal blood pressure? (c) What is the average blood pressure in an adult of 50 years?

9. (a) Into what general classes are foods divided? Give examples of each class. (b) What is the function of each class of food in the nutritive process?

10. (a) Describe the function of the kidneys? How does impairment of the function of the kidneys effect that of the skin and lungs? (b) What effect has the loss of one kidney upon the secretion of urine?

DR. LEWIS A. GRIFFITH,
Examiner.

Wednesday afternoon, December 14, 1921.

PATHOLOGY

1. Give a description of a hob nailed liver. Gross and microscopic.

2. Give a description of a miners' elbow. Gross and microscopic.

3. Give a description of a chorio epithelioma. Gross and microscopic.

4. What is a phlebolith?

5. Contrast a superficial scar with normal skin.

6. Give your idea of the changes leading to a sustained rise in blood pressure.

7. On what principles does the Wasserman reaction depend?

8. Tell what you know of the pathology of edema.

9. What principles justify the administration of lockjaw vaccine?

10. What is meant by the term "focus of infection"? Of what significance is a focus of infection?

DR. HENRY M. FITZHUGH,
Examiner.

Thursday morning, December 15, 1921.

PRACTICE OF MEDICINE

1. Give the symptoms, differential diagnosis and treatment of acute nephritis?

2. Give the diagnostic points of incipient pulmonary tuberculosis and outline your treatment.

3. Give the diagnosis and symptoms of uncinariasis. (Hook-worm disease).

4. Name the chief causes of vomiting.

5. Give the symptoms, prognosis and treatment of purpura hemorrhagica in infants.

6. Differentiate epilepsy and hysteria.

7. Differentiate rubella, scarlet fever and rubella.

8. Give the symptoms and treatment (medical) of peptic ulcer.

9. Give the symptoms and treatment of acute pancreatitis.

10. Outline a treatment for intestinal stasis (Habitual constipation).

DR. ELDREDGE E. WOLFF,
Examiner.

Thursday afternoon, December 15, 1921.

SURGERY

1. Symptomatology and treatment of acute glaucoma.

2. What is the usual cause of ear-ache in children? Give treatment.

3. A patient having received a severe blow over the left temporal region, is unconscious for a time, paralysis coming on late. Discuss the possibilities.

4. Give signs, symptoms, diagnosis and treatment of carcinoma of the breast.

5. What signs, symptoms and laboratory aids would warrant you to make a diagnosis of tuberculosis of the hip joint? Briefly outline treatment.

6. What do you understand by the term hyperthyroidism? Give signs, symptoms and surgical treatment.

7. What are the causes and symptoms of acute intestinal obstruction?

8. Differentiate between appendicitis and renal colic from the standpoint of pain, tenderness, vomiting, urine, blood, and X-ray examinations.

9. State the usual position of the fragments in an oblique fracture of the lower third of the femur and the muscular control of the fragments.

10. State possible lines of transmission of infection in palmar abscess and give the external landmarks for the location of the palmar arches.

DR. HARRY L. HOMER,
Examiner
