

PRESIDENT'S PANEL

on POLITICS AND POLICY

Speaker

KAREN FISHER, JD

Chief Public Policy Officer, Association of American Medical Colleges

"The New World Order: New Administration, Congress Could Remake the Federal Policy Landscape for Academic Medicine"

Karen Fisher, JD, leads the Association of American Medical Colleges' (AAMC) public policy initiatives on medical education, health care delivery, and medical research. She provides guidance to advance the association's legislative and regulatory priorities and develops policy proposals that support the work of academic medicine.

One of the nation's leading experts on Medicare, Fisher has more than 20 years of experience in legislative and regulatory health care policy. Most recently, she served as senior health counsel for the Senate Finance Committee where she played a key role in drafting the Medicare Access and CHIP Reauthorization Act of 2015 and the new Medicare physician payment system. She also served as lead advisor on other Medicare concerns and health care policies.

Before moving to the Senate, Ms. Fisher spent almost a decade as senior director in health care affairs at the AAMC after serving as senior health policy analyst and general counsel for the Prospective Payment Assessment Commission — the precursor to the Medicare Payment Advisory Commission.

Fisher earned both her pharmacy and law degrees from the University of Pittsburgh.
